moving in the same direction as the wind. But if the tide is moving toward you, and the wind is coming from your left, then you'll be surfing a big set coming in on the tide. The technical term is a "left-hander," and the waves will be coming from the left and the wind will be pushing you right. Same thing on the other side of the world when the waves and the wind are coming from the right side of a bigger set. It's called a "right-hander," and the waves will be coming from the right, and the wind is pushing you in that direction. And that's that, folks. We hope you find it a bit easier to understand now.
